About Your Rainbow...

Join Erin and Rowan as their bedtime is transformed into a multicoloured rhyming journey, enabling a visit to each colour of the rainbow in turn. It is a colourful adventure, providing the children with the wisdom and unconditional love they need to face any of life's challenges.

This inspirational bedtime tale, both nurtures and grows the strong bond between parents and children. With mesmerising pictures and a powerful message, it is sure to become a firm favourite for this and the next generation of your family.

Your Rainbow's aim...

I've always loved to write poems and I was encouraged by both my parents and teachers. I was compelled to write this book for not only my children but for all other parents and children who have a shared love of those special bedtime chats that bring families closer together.

My Poem's Journey...

I wrote this particular poem back in 2015 and always intended to get it published. It was not until 2020, that I managed to start pulling all the required elements together. The pandemic brought about some reflection time to consider life, the universe and everything and with the sad passing of my Dad at the start of lockdown, this was the perfect project to focus on. Both as a legacy for my children and in his memory. He also loved writing poems!

About Me

I'm a busy single mum who loves spending time with my family - we're always seeking out new and exciting outdoor adventures!

After 20 years of teaching, I decided to go self-employed this year and have also been writing non-fiction books for the publisher Hinton House about being a special needs coordinator in a school, as well as on social and emotional health in the early years. I also work as an educational consultant for teacher wellbeing and special needs and editing the well-known education blog, @TeacherToolkit.

This year, I have won an award for my teacher well-being work and writing in support of changing working conditions in schools. My award winning blog for pupil and teacher wellbeing is: www.positiveyoungmind.com.
